Arthur Storch

Inspector Arthur Storch (NYPD, retired) has a 23-year history of achievement in the NYPD and a distinguished record in law enforcement training and police consulting. Inspector Storch served as the commanding officer of three narcotics boroughs (Manhattan North, Brooklyn South and Queens), Internal Affairs Zone II, the 106 Precinct, the Personnel Bureau's Staff Services Section and the Career Criminal Monitoring Unit. In every one of these commands, Inspector Storch developed innovative strategies that resulted in unprecedented crime reduction, dismantling of entrenched and violent gangs, and improvement of services.

Over 6 years as a Narcotics Borough Commander yielded too many results to list. Some of the highlights are listed here. In Manhattan North Narcotics, he supervised the highly successful gun/gang investigation into the Netas, which traced the purchased weapons to the source in Georgia. Operation Trojan Horse attacked high-level drug dealing from inside of Washington Heights. The Model Block program cleaned up entrenched drug gangs and returned the community to the public who were imprisoned in their own homes. In Brooklyn South, he supervised the most successful gang case in the history of NYPD, which resulted in the complete removal of the hierarchy of the Latin Kings and over 100 of its members. The clean up of Red Hook Houses became the model of housing development investigations, dubbed Operation Good Neighbor. In that case, over 200 case buys were made into 160 drug dealers. The 6 gangs that controlled that development were completely eradicated. In Queens Narcotics, numerous major cases into the upper echelons of Colombian cartels resulted in multiple high level arrests and record setting seizures of drugs and money. Another newsworthy case involved the identification and dismantlement of 4 drug gangs that controlled drug dealing in Lefrak City. Over 100 members of these gangs were arrested, resulting in a drug free environment for Lefrak City.

While commanding Internal Affairs Zone II, Inspector Storch personally supervised an insurance fraud case that involved one member of the department, who worked in cooperation with an organized auto insurance fraud gang by entering over 160 fraudulent accident reports into NYPD's database. The investigation led to the arrest of the entire organization, including medical and legal professionals.

During his one year as the commanding officer of the 106 Precinct, Inspector Storch developed crime strategies that became models for NYPD and resulted in a record crime reduction (25%). He forged strong ties with the community who donated over $23,000 to purchase bicycles and bicycle uniforms for the officers of the 106 Precinct. Those ties still exist today as he is still asked to appear as an honored guest at many functions there.

Inspector Storch has taught over 10,000 members of NYPD, studying for promotion and over a thousand other members during investigative and post promotion courses. In addition, he was an Adjunct Lecturer and John Jay College of Criminal Justice for 8 years, where he taught numerous police science classes.

Inspector Storch is an expert in reengineering law enforcement agencies, initially performing that function for Police Commissioner Lee Brown and then Police Commissioner William Bratton. This experience has led to consulting contracts with police departments in Hartford, Connecticut; Cincinnati, Ohio; Tennessee and Caracas, Venezuela.

Joseph V. Fodera

Joseph Fodera is a 20-year veteran of the NYPD who recently retired as a Second Grade Detective Investigator within the Major Case Squad of the Detective Bureau's Gang Division. He has conducted in excess of over 1000 gang and narcotics related investigations, resulting in many substantial terms of incarceration for violent felons.

Joseph Fodera was hand selected to become a member of the newly formed Gang Division. His selection was based upon his successful history investigating narcotics enterprises and firearms traffickers. Joe was part of the investigative team responsible for the wide ranging investigation into the criminal activities perpetrated by the Latin Kings street gang and was the lead investigator on several other investigations, including the case credited with virtually eliminating the Neta street gang from the streets of New York City. He has been recognized by the United States Attorney's Office, Eastern District of New York and the Centurion Foundation for his work in reducing the threat of gang violence in New York City. Joe was also nominated for the 2001 Top Cops Award by the National Association of Police Organizations and was honored at their ceremony in Washington D.C.

Various investigative assignments have accorded Mr. Fodera invaluable "hands-on" experience reflective of the quality and degree of professionalism necessary to provide thorough, results-oriented investigative services, including: covert surveillance operations, telecommunications investigations (telephone wire-taps, pen registries, records searches, etc), parallel financial investigations, criminal conspiracy and criminal enterprise investigations, intelligence documentation & analysis, and the performance of over 1000 interviews and interrogations.

Joseph Fodera was also assigned as a Detective Investigator in the Organized Crime Control Bureau's Brooklyn South Narcotics Unit. He has served in the Uniformed Patrol Services Bureau, conducting patrol and anti-crime operations as a Police Officer in various commands throughout Brooklyn. His actions in these capacities have contributed to several high-profile investigations, assisting in the apprehension and conviction of several perpetrators responsible for newsworthy homicides.

He is a contributing author for several law enforcement articles as well as for the "NYPD's Gang Manual", produced by the NY-NJ HIDTA for ONDCP. Additionally, as a delegate for the Detectives' Endowment Association for 9 years, he has distinguished himself as a proponent of equality and safety in the workplace. Mr. Fodera is also a New York State Department of Criminal Justice Services Certified Law Enforcement Instructor and has provided training to a multitude of law enforcement officers in many agencies. He has lectured on Criminal Conspiracy and Criminal Enterprise at the NYPD's nationally recognized Criminal Investigations Course and Homicide Investigations Course. He has also lectured at FBI Headquarters and has provided training for members of the Metropolitan Police Service, Scotland Yard, London, England.

As President of Worldwide Law Enforcement Consulting Group, Inc., Joseph Fodera manages all aspects of the business, including day to day operations, marketing, sales, proposal development, human resources and staff management. In addition, he provides consulting services and conducts training for law enforcement, corporate and government clients. Mr. Fodera also utilizes his expertise to develop and coordinate training programs for law enforcement professionals, and acting as a liaison with law enforcement agencies and executives.
